Greetings from Juneau,

My husband and I would like to weigh in as two Alaskans who are against the dead-end road. The cost estimates for the road are way too low, and the technology is not yet in place to build a safe, sustainable road. There are many other more pressing transportation needs than that road to another ferry terminal through the most amazing, pristine, and beautiful area which is much more valuable if left in its wild state. Let's instead improve our marine highway system and fix the roads we have. For Juneauites, a second road crossing to Douglas makes much more sense, if you want to build a new road. We urge you to spend your time on these more pressing needs.
